

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

DR. J. WILLIAM WHITE, Professor of Clinical Surgery in the University of Pennsylvania, says that he has used PHÉNOL SODIQUE in his private practice for twenty years and that he has learned to have great confidence in it as an antiseptic. He thinks that the combination of qualities alluded to in the above paragraph, namely, the fact that it is hemostatic, anesthetic, and antiseptic at the same time, gives it a peculiar and especial value.

PYROZONE 3 per cent Solution

Does not depreciate in strength, and can be relied upon both as to stability and accurate medicinal effect.

"In private families where there is invalidism with its unpleasant odors and its dangerous excretions, Pyrozone 3 per cent Solution should be liberally used as a deodorant, pus destroyer, and general germicide. It is harmless to living tissue, and can be taken internally with benefit in certain troubles affecting the stomach."—The National Board of Health Magazine.

"Pyrozone 3 per cent Solution 'keeps'; it cleans foul noses and throats excellently; acts as a hæmostatic after small operations; cleans diphtheria mouths and noses very well, thins the pseudo-membrane somewhat. In short, Pyrozone is of permanent usefulness; it is an excellent cleanser of nasty mucous membranes.
"New York, March, 1895. Yours, (Signed) W. P. NORTHRUP, M.D."

Pyrozone 3 per cent Solution, which is of correct pharmacopœial strength, received the highest commendation and the constant patronage of the medical bureau of the World's Columbian Exposition. Similar and more emphatic praise is being received by almost every mail, speaking of it as the best gargle, mouth wash, and general antiseptic cleanser that has been produced from the H_2O_2 in solution.

Pyrozone 3 per cent Solution should be dispensed only in the original 4-ounce amber glass-stoppered bottles; other containers are rarely chemically clean.

PREFACE.

THE IDEAL NURSE.*

IT seems scarcely possible that ten or twelve years ago, in the largest hospital we have, the Philadelphia, and in the most active teaching hospital, the University, the nursing was done by persons who to-day would not be employed by the smallest or poorest hospital in this State. In the former it was disgraceful; in the latter, to say the least, it was unsatisfactory. America was far behind Europe, certainly far behind England, in those days. But the last decade has been marked by advances in both the science and the art of nursing that are simply marvelous.

There can be no question that the very general association of training schools with hospitals, which during these years has come to be the rule throughout our country, has been of the greatest advantage to the latter. While it is true that a school of nursing without hospital wards in which to teach would be like a school of gardening without a field in which to dig and plant, it is almost equally true that a hospital without its training school would be like the same field without gardeners to keep down the weeds, irrigate the soil, strengthen the weaklings, and prune or prop as occasion requires.

I know of no exception to the statement that in every instance the addition of a training school to a hospital has increased its efficiency, and in the long run has reduced both its expenses and, what is vastly more important, its mortality. Evidence recently collected shows beyond all question that the material prosperity of the hospital is largely due to the work of the training school. "To just what extent this is true would perhaps be impossible to say, for where a dawning rationalism in medicine, antiseptics in surgery, a growing intelligence in public opinion, and trained nursing are contemporaneous, each stimulating, and being stimulated, by the others, no one could candidly ascribe results to one isolated influence. Yet whether it be a coincidence or not, in this country at least, a definite impetus and advance in hospital work dates from the foundation of trained nursing. The testimony received from over forty hospitals is unanimous on this point, not one exception having been met with. 'Our results are better both in medicine and surgery,' they say. 'The work of our hospital has extended in every direction. There is a marked diminution in the popular dread of hospitals. Private patients come in greater numbers, and many ascribe their willingness to enter to the presence of the nurses. The difference in general comfort and happiness of the patients would be enough, if there were nothing more, to secure the gratitude of the hospital to the school, while the difference in the death rate marks an era in the treatment of the sick.'"* My old friend, Prof. Louis Agassiz, used to be fond of telling a story of Fichte, the philosopher, who, when asked by the King of Prussia what he could do to restore the power and influence of his kingdom, which had been despoiled by Napoleon, replied, "Found a great university, Sire," and this was the origin of the University of Berlin. If, in olden times, a hospital trustee had asked me what he could do to further its prosperity and good works, I would have said, "Organize a training school," and the facts to-day would have established the soundness of the advice.

*A portion of an address delivered by Dr. J. William White, Professor of Clinical Surgery in the University of Pennsylvania, before the Wilkes-Barre Training School for Nurses.

Descriptions of the old system, if that word can be applied to a condition of affairs which was the most unsystematic imaginable, are now of merely historical interest. The stupid convalescents, who had never seen the inside of a hospital prior to the illness or accident that brought them there; the intemperate attendants, who had drifted into their positions, or secured them through personal or political influence, after demonstrating their absolute untrustworthiness in every other capacity; the slatternly, loud-voiced, unkempt females, who, if they had reached the Mrs. Gamp period of life, and, through laziness, left the patients to the mercies of nature, were perhaps a degree less dangerous than those who were young and energetic,—all these come up before our mental vision, but, thank Heaven, have disappeared as to their corporeal presence.

I simply mention them that they may serve as a background to the ideal nurse of to-day, some of whose most essential qualities, personal and professional, I shall endeavor to describe in the time which you have kindly allotted me.

I may begin by saying that she should be good looking, but hasten to add that the adjective is to be understood in its literal sense, and not as a synonym for "pretty" or "handsome." Truth compels me to admit that I do not object to the latter qualities, and I may say in all seriousness that while it would be absurd to insist upon or to expect in nurses regularity of feature, it is quite proper and reasonable to look for the neatness, the cleanliness, the evidences of the health which comes from attention to personal hygiene, and the expression of countenance which is associated with habitual cheerfulness of disposition, all of which make a nurse good looking in the best signification of the word. The last-named quality is one which I am disposed to rank above most others in a nurse's appearance. The woman who makes but little use of her corrugator supercilii (in frowning), but who habitually employs her levator anguli oris (in smiling), has in her very disposition an excellent foundation for the making of a good nurse.

* Dock, "Hospitals, Dispensaries, Nursing," 1894, p. 92.

She should have reached a time of life when there comes a realizing sense of its trials and responsibilities, but should still enjoy the vigor and strength of youth. She should have a fair preliminary education before beginning her training, and I may add, should lose no chance in later life of broadening it in directions not immediately connected with her profession.

Olive Schreiner has well described the requirements of such a woman: "A woman who does a woman's work needs a many-sided, multiform culture; the heights and depths of human life must not be beyond her vision; she must have knowledge of men and things in many states, a wide catholicity of sympathy, the strength that springs from knowledge, and the magnanimity that springs from strength." In just so far as the women of our training schools attain to this standard will the institutions and communities in which they labor feel and show forth the influence of that "sweet ordering, arrangement, and decision" that are woman's chief prerogatives.*

I say nothing now or later about the moral qualities, because as a matter of fact, while I have known nurses of all degrees of excellence as regards their nursing, I have known almost none who were not good women. The bad ones, if any of them ever take up the study of nursing at all, seem to be weeded out somewhere during the process, a fact which speaks volumes for the efficiency of our training schools.

These, then, are the factors which should be from the start inherent in the ideal nurse,—neatness and cheerfulness, health, strength, and energy, a mind prepared for the reception of scientific truths. They are few, but they include the essentials. Having started with them, what are we to expect from our nurse at the time of her graduation? What should she have learned? What responsibilities may we properly put upon her? What service is she prepared to render us?

It is extremely important that the correct answers to these questions should be understood by three classes of persons,—the laity, the profession, the nurses themselves.

Much is expected to-day from the trained nurse; more will inevitably be looked for in the future. All of us who are charged with the responsibility of human life are being held to a stricter account than ever before in the history of the world, and it is right that it should be so. The recent progress of medical knowledge has been marvelous. Within the memories of the youngest of us there have been almost wiped out of the tables of mortality diseases that used to number their victims by tens of thousands; the operating room has been twice over robbed of its terrors, and even the fever ward is slowly but surely yielding up its secrets to the skilled observers of to-day.

It is but natural that with the improvement in methods and results in surgery and medicine there should have been a concomitant advance in nursing, which has during this same time stepped from the position of handmaid to our profession to that of friend and companion. But if it is to hold its new place it must justify it by its works. Many difficulties remain to be overcome. There are, of course, persons with the slowly vanishing, but once very general, prejudice against the trained nurse as an intruder in the household, and with the associated form of idiocy, also becoming obsolete, which believes in the special gift of some member of the family for taking care of the sick. There are also feeble-minded persons who think that the nursing of males by females is immodest, and there are delusional lunatics who believe that there is no advantage to the sick in either doctoring or nursing.

With these people we need not concern ourselves. They exist numerically in an inverse ratio to the general intelligence of the population, and are found chiefly in the rural districts. The difficulty to-day is rather with the unreasonable persons who expect too much from the nurse, and some of these persons are to be found even in the medical profession, though there, of course, this, like all other forms of unreasonableness, is of the most extreme rarity.

In answering, therefore, the questions I have propounded, I must be understood as speaking neither for the detractors of nursing nor for those who think with a gentleman who recently wrote to the superintendent of a training-school asking that a nurse be recommended to him, and who summed up the necessary qualifications by saying that he wanted an "intelligent saint."

As to what she should have learned, it would be useless to enumerate the studies which are provided for in the ordinary curriculum of each school. Every graduated nurse has learned enough of them to satisfy her examiners, though that is often more easy of accomplishmene than it should be.

Our ideal nurse will, however, have learned, in addition to the anatomy and physiology of the body in health, something of the anatomy and physiology of disease. She will have acquired not only an understanding of the functions of the brain as they are set forth in the text-books, but an insight into the workings of the same organ when benumbed by shock, excited by fever, or poisoned by infection.

She will have become familiar not merely with the sensory and motor nerves and their course to and from the spinal cord as they are found in all of us, but also with the same nerves when they are thrilling with agony, or are carrying the impulse that leads to the twitchings of chorea or to the frightful convulsions of epilepsy. She will know not only what a furred, parched, rough tongue indicates and what it looks like, but she will have a sympathetic appreciation of what it must feel like and a knowledge of the best ways to lessen its discomfort. She will carry the chemistry of the class room into the diet kitchen and the ward, and in addition to being able to name the temperature at which albumen coagulates or starch carbonizes, she will know a properly boiled egg and a well-made piece of toast when she sees them. She will know the analogy between the souring of milk, the "working" of preserves, and the presence of bad odors about a wound, and she will apply her knowledge so that none of them shall occur within the limits of her jurisdiction. She will know, theoretically, that to relax a muscle it is necessary to approximate its points of origin and insertion, while practically she will understand what muscles are making a recent stump or a broken limb twitch and quiver, and what position to put them in to stop it. She will apply her acquaintance with the laws of gravitation and hydrostatics to the arrest of hemorrhage or to the mitigation of the throbbing pain of a felon or a palmar abscess.

She will understand the laws of ventilation and the value of oxygen, but in her scientific eagerness to secure the proper cubic inches of fresh air she will not give our convalescent patients bronchitis or pneumonia from draughts. She will be able to describe the precise value of the skin in throwing off effete products, but in her desire to encourage it she will not exhaust the patient by too frequent scrubbings and dressings. She will know the proportions of the serum and the fibrin, and the corpuscles in the blood; but she will also know the difference between the watery stain in the dressings which simply means "reinforce," and the ominous, rapidly spreading spot which says to a good nurse, "Hemorrhage! send for a surgeon!" She will have a good memory for her past cases, and an abiding interest in them, but she will carefully refrain from giving her neuropathic patients undergoing a rest cure a blood-curdling description of her last hip-joint amputation or Cæsarean section. She will be an earnest student and a careful observer of human nature, familiarity with which is one of the secrets of success in her profession, as it is in ours; but she will not communicate the results of her observations in one family to the members of the next in which she chances to nurse.

The list might be greatly extended, but this will serve to show the use which, so far as the patient is concerned, our ideal nurse will make of the ombined book-learning and bedside experience of her years of training.

Webb's C. P. Spirit, Absolutely Pure.

As to her relations with her chief, much might be said. The usual comparison is that between a soldier and his superior officer, and the qualities of obedience and of exactness in carrying out of orders are much dwelt on. They are immensely valuable to be sure, and if their absence in any nurse is conspicuous she is worse than useless; but they have been over-emphasized. I have known a nurse who was directed to give a patient a tablespoonful of peptonized milk every half hour, to continue that dose at that exact interval during the twenty-four hours which intervened before the medical man's next visit, depriving both the patient and herself of much-needed rest to do it, although the first dose and every succeeding dose were vomited. This is the nursing of a Chinaman or an automaton. It is good nursing as long as everything goes right and the unexpected does not occur. In the presence of unforeseen accidents it is very poor nursing. Let us say that our ideal nurse will always carry out orders when they should be carried out, but will vary from them when circumstances imperatively indicate that the good of the patient requires her to do so.

But altogether apart from the orders which she will receive from the attending physician or surgeon our ideal nurse will find a multitude of ways in which to make her presence a positive blessing, not only to the patient but to the family, if she is nursing in a private house. If I were asked to name the chief source of difficulty associated with the employment of trained nurses in private practice,—apart from the question of expense, which is often a serious one,—I would answer that it is the friction between the nurse and the female members of the family. As a rule, this is the fault of the latter, and is easily understood. A little, not unnatural, jealousy at being superseded in the kindly offices to the sick which it is an especial pleasure to women to render; a little annoyance at the invasion of kitchen and pantry and at the necessary disturbance of household gods by a stranger; a dislike often very strong in women—who are instinctively exclusive—to admit an additional person to the intimacy of the family circle,—these factors, nearly always at work, explain why in so many instances the attending physician or surgeon, while he feels that his patient is being properly cared for, will be annoyed by the complaints of the mother or wife or sister, who, perhaps admitting that the nurse is necessary to the invalid, will insist that she is destructive to the happiness of the rest of the household. This will never happen with our ideal nurse. Before she has been in the house twenty-four hours the female head of the family will feel that she is merely resigning temporarily to a respectful and admiring subordinate the physical labor of a task which no unaided individual with merely human attributes could carry on at such a level of perfection. The cook and chambermaid will find that their hitherto unrecognized merits have at last met with the appreciation they deserve, and the entire family will have renewed confidence in the almost superhuman skill of their medical adviser, and increased satisfaction in their own sagacity in selecting him. This atmosphere, easily produced by the exercise of a little tact, without the slightest strain upon veracity, is distinctly to the advantage of the patient. Details are less likely to be forgotten or neglected; the unknown forces through which well persons unconsciously react upon one another, and which still more powerfully influence the sick, are more likely to be beneficial. The physician himself, being but human, and often tired and over-worked, will probably stop in oftener and stay longer and give more undivided attention to the patient and the treatment than if he has to listen to complaints or to fault-finding.

The nurse can do still more to economize for him both time and temper. Attention has often been called by the eulogists of nursing to the difference between the time spent with the patient by the doctor and that spent by the nurse, and the consequent increased opportunities for observation enjoyed by the latter. "The hands of a nurse are the physician's hands lengthened out to minister to the sick. Her watchful presence at the bedside is a trained vigilance supplementing and perfecting his study and treatment of the case; her knowledge of his patient's condition an essential element in the diagnosis of the disease; in short, her management of the patient the practical side of medical science. If she fails to appreciate her duties, the physician fails in the same degree to bring aid to his patient."* This is so unquestionably true that most medical men endeavor to utilize the nurse's hours of observation by requiring a written report, usually made on a blank with appropriate headings and subdivisions. In my own practice I find infinite variation in the way these blanks are filled up, and I know no better index than they afford to the practical usefulness of the nurse.

The poorest nurses—the slothful and negligent ones—will do as little writing as possible. A column, the heading of which specifies that at each dressing all the details about the appearance of a wound shall be noted, the presence or absence of pain, redness or discharge, the removal of stitches, the complaints of the patient, etc., will contain the two words "wound dressed," or perhaps only a single dash intended to signify the same thing.

When I see a chart kept in this way, which I do only too often, I am reminded of the little boy's diary,—"Got up, washed, dressed, went to bed;" or still more forcibly of the old story of the gentleman who having given a restaurant waiter elaborate directions as to the stewing of some oysters, the quantity of butter, milk, and salt, the kind of pepper, the time of cooking, etc., was disgusted at seeing him go to a speaking tube and call down to the kitchen "one stew."

* Hampton, quoting from a physician's address, ibid., page 33.

Webb's C. P. Spirit, Absolutely Pure.

On the other hand, the officious or over-conscientious nurse, with but moderate intelligence, will burden the chart with such elaborate descriptions of unimportant trifles that the grain cannot be threshed out from among the husks without a great expenditure of time and labor. Our ideal nurse in an average case would probably not note the patient's position in bed, but if, for example, after an abdominal section the knees were persistently drawn up, or if after a head injury the patient obstinately turned on his side and drew up his knees, or, if after obscure pains in one loin the knee on that side was drawn up and not the other, the fact would be noted in the column headed "Remarks," and would serve as an invaluable guide to the surgeon who might at his comparatively brief visit chance to find the patient in a position not so significant.

As to her bearing towards her chief, much depends on the personal equation. For the existence of the most pleasant and satisfactory relations it is obvious that there must be a foundation of mutual respect and confidence. But nurses cannot always be expected to have these feelings towards the medical man with whom they are temporarily associated. They may know nothing whatever of him; they may have reason to believe that his ability is mediocre; or his methods may be very different from those which they have been taught during their period of training. Under these circumstances the qualities of tact and of faithfulness in the discharge of duty, irrespective of individual opinion, come prominently to the front. Our ideal nurse will have the former so well developed that she will never wound the amour propre of the practitioner, and the latter so firmly ingrained that she will be more than usually exact in carrying out every direction minutely.

She will remember that she is trusted in by the medical man who is burdened with the responsibility of the life or death of the patient, and that she must show herself worthy of that trust; she will recall, too, the undoubted fact that members of the medical profession are not infrequently mistaken in their estimate of the ability of a fellow-practitioner, and still oftener in their views as to the propriety of his treatment of any particular case, and as they are undoubtedly the most competent critics she will realize how much more likely are nurses or the laity to err in the same direction, and will not only refrain from voicing her opinions, whatever they may be, but will be rigidly careful not to allow them to make her vary a hair's breadth from the path of obedience.

Of course, while she is in the hospital, she will be more or less influenced by the gentlemen who practically rule those institutions and whom we call "residents," on account of the fact that whenever they can spare time from out-door pursuits and from society they come to the hospital for meals and sleeping accommodations. She may acquire from them that haughty contempt for chiefs in general, and especially for their own chief, which they are often unable to conceal. She may feel, like them, that it is almost a matter of principle to expose the hollow mockery of the claims of the visiting staff to know anything, and she may, like them, think that an entire reversal of treatment as soon as the chief has left the building, and the surreptitious performance of operations which otherwise would fall into his unworthy hands, will result in a great saving of human life, and is therefore in the line of duty. But it is only fair to say that she is but rarely the subject of this form of "megalocephalus" or "delirium of grandeur," which is pereninally epidemic with residents, and that she recovers from it as soon as she is removed from their malign influence.

I need scarcely mention self-sacrifice and willingness to undergo deprivation of personal comforts, bodily fatigue, mental strain, and even physical danger as being among the attributes of the nurse I am describing. To the honor of all nurses be it said that these qualities are almost never absent, even in those who in other ways are far from satisfactory. I have had too many patients saved for me after hovering on the verge of the grave and brought back to life and health by the untiring and unremitting devotion of nurses, not to pay them as a class this sincere and well-deserved tribute.

My especial and particular ideal nurse will be light of foot, prompt in movement, ready but brief in answer, precise and systematic in work. She will be quick to see a joke and kindly disposed towards an attempt at one. She will not be too thin-skinned when found fault with, even if she does not altogether merit it. She will understand that an occasional gibe at some error or oversight of hers will often serve better than a didactic lecture in preventing its recurrence, and that at any rate it is a form of reproof almost invariably reserved for those one likes and respects.

She will also, after having been taught with great care all the personal details which are peculiar to my methods of treatment of surgical cases, avoid being led into the bonds of matrimony at an early date, and subsequently limiting herself to obstetric and pædiatric nursing, with special reference to to her own requirements.

If she remains in her chosen profession, there are dangers to be avoided which are not few or trifling. It is folly to tell a nurse not to think of the money side of her work, of the wage-getting. She is, as a rule, far more worthy of her hire than the majority of laborers of our sex, and also, as a rule, makes better use of it. The proportion, among nurses, of women who support not only themselves but their families is remarkably large. They must think of their pay. But it is quite right that they should be told not to think of it as though it were the only, or even the chief, thing to be thought of. Neither the nurse nor the physician who does this will attain the highest success in their respective professions, nor will they gain the greatest happiness. There are, or have been, in many communities, examples of the very best type of self-sacrificing labor and disregard of personal interest among nurses, and our ideal nurse would familiarize herself with the life history and the work of such women, and while taking a rational and self-respecting view of the pecuniary value of her services, would not begrudge them to those too poor or too unfortunate to be able to pay her in coin of the realm.

She would avoid falling into the rut of routine or the slough of self-satisfaction, and thinking that there was nothing more for her to learn. She would not permit her intellectual and scientific interest in her cases to supersede her practical and human interest. It is said of some of our more distinguished continental brethren in the profession that each patient presents to them two intensely absorbing possibilities, that of making a diagnosis and that of making an autopsy. Our nurse will always take a pride in the technique of her work, and whether it is reinserting a tracheotomy tube in an emergency, giving a hypodermic injection, or merely changing a sheet with the minimum of exposure and disturbance, she will enjoy doing it as well as is humanly possible. But having done it she will never forget that, like everything else she does, it is but a means to an end, a step towards the goal, which is—the recovery of the patient. Preventive medicine is the most recent development of our science. Preventive nursing is already foreshadowed, but at present the object and aim of all nursing may be summed up in four words,—"Get the patient well," and for this our ideal nurse will ever strive.

My attempted picture of her is meant to be in a sense true to life, but must be regarded as a composite photograph, or as an impressionist portrait in which what you see is supposed to exist in your own mind, and what you do not see is left to your imagination. As a matter of fact, the portrait falls far short of the reality as in more than one instance it has come under my notice.

If, however, such a combination of excellences should at first seem discouraging to the aspirant for honors in nursing, and if she would gain strength in well-doing and inspiration for better things from the knowledge that many who had gone before have left an indelible record of conscientious discharge of professional duty, unremitting devotion to the interests of the sick, heroic self-sacrifice in the presence of danger, unselfish consecration of their whole lives to high purposes, I can assure her that she will find examples without stint in the history of her chosen profession.

THE LAUREL HILL CEMETERY,

Situated on Ridge Avenue, between Thirty-fourth and Thirty-Sixth Streets,

PHILADELPHIA.

The Laurel Hill Cemetery is the oldest suburban cemetery in the United States, with the exception of Mt. Auburn in Boston. Founded in 1835, it has long been famous among the places of interest in Philadelphia, for the natural beauty of its site and scenery (embellished by much skill and labor), the magnificence and variety of its monuments, and the names of the distinguished dead who lie buried within its walls. Occupying one of the most exquisite situations in the neighborhood of Philadelphia, on the high and wooded bank of the Schuylkill River (adjoining East and opposite West Fairmount Park), it is easily reached on foot as well as by steamboat, electric car, and carriage (via drives in the East Park), and steam cars (via Pennsylvania Railroad from Broad and Market Streets, to Ridge Avenue Station, a few squares from the Cemetery, and via Reading Railroad from depot Twelfth and Market Streets and Twenty-third and Chestnut Streets to station on the Cemetery ground). It is peculiarly and perfectly protected from encroachments by its surroundings, having Ridge Avenue on the east, the river on the west, and the Park on the remaining sides.

The prices of lots range from 58⅓ cents to $3.00 per square foot, according to location; and the sizes from 8 feet by 10 feet to any size desired, so that lots can be purchased for from about $55.00 to almost any sum.

The management wish to call the attention of visitors and lot-holders to the fact that, in the grounds of the Cemetery, they have a large and well-stocked Greenhouse, in the charge of an experienced gardener, who can furnish Plants, Cut Flowers, Crosses, Wreaths, etc., at short notice, and at reasonable prices, and who can arrange to take the care of lots, and do desired decoration, at a reasonable yearly charge.

BENJAMIN W. RICHARDS, Secretary-Treasurer,

Office, No. 45 South Seventeenth Street.

Lots can be obtained at the Cemetery, or at Company's Office.

TELEPHONE No. 5707.

strength—weakness

It is one thing not to be poor and another thing to be rich. It is one thing not to be a coward and another thing to be a hero. It is one thing not to be weak, and another, and a much finer thing, to be strong.

The virtue of a man is in the splendid thing that he is, and not in the unsatisfactory thing that he is not.

To be strong is to have no ache, no pain, to laugh at difficulty, to challenge rivalry—victory before the fight begins. It is to have life, and to enjoy life, abundantly. For all not strong people nature has provided the means of strength. For two centuries the doctors have said that the way to get and keep strong is to have a proper reserve force, that the best builder of reserve force is the oil the codfish stores up in its liver. We accept the testimony of two hundred years and prepare the cod-liver oil in the form of Scott's Emulsion, which is the best form in which it can most easily and quickly be converted into fat and strength.

And to help in the building up of the whole body we add the hypophosphites of lime and soda, which quickens the nerve force and restores vigor to the entire system.

IMPERIAL = GRANUM

Is earnestly recommended as a safe and reliable FOOD for Nursing-Mothers, Infants and CHILDREN, and for Aged-persons; and as a PURE, nourishing and delicious FOOD for INVALIDS and Convalescents. It is not a chemical--but a perfectly natural, unsweetened--FOOD, most carefully prepared from the finest growths of wheat. One on which physicians can always rely as being absolutely neutral, and which will neither interfere with the action of the most delicate drug, nor in any way retard the progress of nature. Its excellence in FEVERS, and in all gastric and enteric diseases is universally acknowledged, and it is often the ONLY FOOD the stomach will tolerate, when life seems depending on its retention.

Wampole's

Aromatic Laxative Compound

A pleasant and effective laxative preparation, very agreeable in taste, prompt and certain in action. Each teaspoonful represents one drachm of Compound Licorice Powder, U. S. P.

Physicians will find that AROMAT. LAX. COMP. (WAMPOLE) will meet the demand by the profession for an absolutely safe, pleasant and reliable laxative combination, which can be readily prescribed to suit the case and condition. It is entirely free from griping effect, gentle but positive in action, and without debilitating or constipating after-effects. It can be given WITH SAFETY to the very young or the very old, and to the sick under nearly all conditions of disease.

Unlike most remedies of its class, this preparation can be used regularly, if necessary, without any possibility of producing functional derangement, and in constipated conditions can be used in decreasing doses until natural movements result.

DOSE.—For adults, as a laxative, one to two teaspoonfuls. As a cathartic, one-half to one tablespoonful. For Children, according to age.

A NEW Remedy, WAMPOLE'S ANÆMIOL. TRADE-MARK.

A distinctive preparation of Beef, containing HÆMOGLOBIN and ALBUMIN; a highly nutritious and restorative food, and an iron tonic of great value. Analysis by Robert G. Eccles, M.D., shows the presence of 46 % COAGULABLE ALBUMINOIDS AND PROTEIDS, in the moist state.

INDICATIONS.—Anæmia, Chlorosis, Typhoid, Intestinal Affections, General Debility, Convalescence, Pneumonia, La Grippe, and kindred diseases, where a concentrated and easily absorbed food is demanded.

Full and complete analysis by Dr. Eccles.

Prepared Solely by Henry K. Wampole & Co.

Manufacturing Pharmacists, 441 Green St., Philadelphia.

"Mizpah"

Valve Nipples

Cannot Collapse.

THEY HAVE A VALVE
to prevent a vacuum being formed to collapse them.

THEY ARE RIBBED INSIDE
so that the child cannot collapse them by biting on them.

THEY HAVE A RIM INSIDE
the end of the nipple to catch under the lip of the bottle so that no child can pull the nipple off the bottle.

THE PUNCTURE IS VERY SMALL so that milk can not be drawn fast enough to impair digestion by feeding too fast.

Nursing with this nipple is PERFECTLY EASY and no air can be drawn into the stomach with the food to cause colic.

SAMPLE FREE. A sample of this nipple will be mailed free to any nurse on request, with other valuable nursery information.

PHILADELPHIA.

For the Scientific Treatment and Cure of Alcoholism, Morphinism, and other Narcotics.

THE PRIVATE SANITARIUM is the only regular institution in Philadelphia for the scientific treatment of Alcoholism and Morphinism. The resident physician and the consulting physicians prescribe for and treat each patient separately. Our phenomenal success during the last three years, with cases coming from the so-called "cures," is convincing proof that this is the only scientific method of treatment. Webb's C. P. Spirit, Absolutely Pure.

The Acutely Sick, as well as chronic invalids, are starved daily while using beef tea, calfsfoot jelly, and the various beef extracts made by application of heat. None of these things contain a particle of nutrition, nor do they contribute anything for the support of the vital processes, but act solely as stimulants, not restoratives. BOVININE holds in solution the albumoids and salts of lean, raw meat, prepared by a cold process, containing the life-sustaining and tissue-building properties of the meat itself. Contains no medication whatever. Put up in 6 and 12 oz. bottles, at 60 cents and $1.00. 12 oz. contains the strength of 10 pounds of meat.

Webb's C. P. Spirit, Absolutely Pure.

The Chesebrough Manufacturing Company, Consolidated, in the interest of the medical profession, has obtained permission to print the following letter, which was addressed by Dr. Wilcox to one of our factory Superintendents, without being asked for by him. It seems that Dr. Wilcox had been using substitutes for as a spray, in his practice, with poor results, and Mr. McGeorge suggested that it was hardly fair to blame Vaseline for the shortcoming of Petrolatum and to try the genuine article. Dr. Wilcox's letter shows that he followed this suggestion, and his experience in doing so :—

Reynold W. Wilcox, M.A., M.D., LL.D.

Professor of Clinical Medicine and Therapeutics at the New York Post-Graduate Medical School and Hospital; Visiting Physician to St. Mark's Hospital; Assistant Visiting Physician to Bellevue Hospital; Fellow of the American, and of the New York Academy of Medicine, etc.

New York, November 11, 1894.
No. 706 Madison Avenue.

Dear Mr. McGeorge :

I followed your suggestions and procured some of the Chesebrough Vaseline from Hegeman. I threw away all my old stock, cleaned out my tubes, and prepared the new mixtures. I am delighted to say that everything now works satisfactorily. You do not know how much I thank you for helping me out of what was getting to be a very serious difficulty, for that part of my work is important, and I was not doing so much good to my patients as I should have done.

Again thanking you I am,

Sincerely yours,

R. W. WILCOX.

To
MR. ARTHUR MCGEORGE,
NEW YORK.
